Report of Fourth Ordinary General Meeting

(EIGHTH ANNUAL GENERAL MEETING).

THE FOURTH ORDINARY GENERAL MEETING of the EGYPT EXPLORATION FUND since its incorporation as a Society (its eighth since the foundation of the Fund in 1883) was held on Friday afternoon, February 20th, in the large room of the Zoological Society, 3 Hanover Square; the President, Sir John Fowler, Bart., K.C.M.G., in the Chair.

There were present: Prof. Reginald Stuart Poole, LL.D., Vice-President of the Fund; Miss Amelia B. Edwards, LL.D., Vice-President and Honorary Secretary; H. A. Grueber, Esq., F.S.A., Honorary Treasurer; Hellier Gosselin, Esq., Secretary; E. Maunde Thompson, Esq., C.B., LL.D., principal librarian of the British Museum; T. H. Baylis, Esq., Q.C.; A. S. Murray, Esq., LL.D.; Barclay V. Head, Esq., D.C.L.; Mrs. Tirard; Miss H. M. Adair; and Miss Bradbury, Members of the Committee; and several of the Local Honorary Secretaries.

The proceedings were opened by the PRESIDENT, who called upon the Secretary to read the list of Members of Committee who were retiring in rotation, and the list of Members recommended for re-election. The President then declared the order of business (following the election of Members of Committee and other officers) to be as follows: (1) report of the Hon. Treasurer; (2) report of the Hon. Secretary; (3) archæological survey and other business.

Mr. R. S. Poole, before the business was discussed, drew the attention of the meeting to the great loss which the Society had sustained in the death of the late Canon Liddon, one of the most valued and eminent members of Committee. From Canon Liddon, although he could not very frequently attend their meetings, the Committee had received a never-failing sympathy and support. He was a man of such profound knowledge, and of such a noble simplicity of character, that his association with the work was a continual source of strength to his colleagues. Mr. Poole concluded his eloquent tribute by saying that he refrained from further eulogy, knowing well that such reticence would have been most acceptable to the late Canon himself.

Mr. H. A. Grueber, Hon. Treasurer, then submitted the Balance Sheet, and read his Financial Report.

FINANCIAL REPORT OF THE HONORARY TREASURER FOR 1889–90.

The Balance Sheet which it is my duty to submit to you this day marks another period of financial prosperity in the annals of the Fund. Upon comparing our present position with that of former years, it will be seen that, financially, the Fund continues to make steady progress. To keep it up to this high level, I need scarcely say, is no light task; and the credit of the prosperous state of affairs is due, now as before, to the great organising powers and unremitting exertions of your Hon. Secretary and Vice-President, Miss Edwards; to the continued brilliant services of your Hon.

Treasurer for America, the Rev. W. C. Winslow; and also to the hearty co-operation of the several Local Honorary Secretaries.

The items of the Balance Sheet now before you may be briefly summarised in the following manner: The total expenditure for the year 1889-90 was £2250 6s. 8d., which sum is made up as follows: (1) For M. Naville's expenses connected with his visit to Cairo in the early spring of last year to inspect the site of Ahnas and to make final arrangements for the excavations which he is now superintending, £141 3s. (2) For the transport of the blocks excavated in 1888-9, from Bubastis to Alexandria, £960 1s. 4d.; this sum also includes all the canal dues, wharfage charges at Alexandria, and Count D'Hulst's salary from August, 1889, to May, 1890. (3) For the transport of the blocks from Alexandria to England, and thence to their several destinations in the United Kingdom, the Continent, and America, £416 7s. 8d. (4) To Dr. Farley Goddard, the American Student, £150. (5) For wood-blocks, wire-rope, &c., used in the removal of the large pieces of sculpture at Bubastis, £14 2s. 2d. (6) For Publications, which include the printing and illustrating of Naukratis II. and Onias, and other expenses connected with Pithom, Tanis I., the Two Hieroglyphic Papyri, and packing and labelling the same, £239 14s. 2d.; and (7) For the usual expenses connected with rent of office, secretarial salaries, printing, stationery, postage, &c., £328 18s. 4d.

The total receipts for the same season have been £3283 8s. 10d.: (1) By Subscriptions and Donations, £3154 17s. 2d. These may be thus subdivided: (a) Through Miss Edwards personally, £361 8s. 1d.; (b) through the Bankers, the Local Hon. Secretaries and the Treasurer, £656 3s. 9d. (from this amount, however, must be deducted £43 for Subscriptions paid in advance during the previous year); (c) through the Rev. W. C. Winslow, £1523 (which includes £173 for the American Student's Fund); (d) from the University of Philadelphia, £240 (£150 of which was to be devoted to the general purposes of the Fund; the remaining £90 to go towards the expenses of the transport of the blocks which the University received as a donation); (e) through the Supplementary Transport Fund, £316 3s. 10d. (which was made up of various contributions received from the Public Museums and Institutions to which blocks of Sculpture were presented); and (f) from contributions to the Survey Fund raised by Miss Edwards, £101 1s. 6d. (2) From the Sale of Publications, £108 9s.; and (3) From the proceeds of Lectures given by the Rev. Canon Bell, Mr. W. W. Morrell, and Miss Barlow, £20 2s. 8d.

There are two items in the foregoing particulars to which I think it necessary to call the attention of the meeting, on account of their magnitude, and also on account of their having exceeded the estimate which I made in my report of last year. I refer to expenses connected with the transport of antiquities from Bubastis to Alexandria, and thence to their ultimate destination. In last year's report I stated that the number of blocks which it was contemplated exporting was sixteen, and that the cost would be about £400. On account of the wholesale destruction which was being carried on by the natives, the Committee subsequently decided that it would be advisable to remove as many blocks as possible; and in the end no less than 44 were taken from the site of Bubastis, of which 36 came to England and were divided amongst the British Museum and various other Museums in the United Kingdom, and also the Museums in Geneva, Canada, Boston, and Philadelphia; 4 went to Berlin, and 4 to Paris.

The various institutions thus enriched generously consented to contribute towards the expenses of transport, so that the Fund has already received back the sum of £406 3s. 10d.; and I am expecting every day a further sum of £104 15s., being the contribution promised by the Louvre at Paris. I hope, also, that before the close of the present Government financial year, the Trustees of the British Museum may be able to further increase the Transport Fund, as their contribution for the large number of blocks which that institution has received from the Fund.

On comparing our financial position of last year with that of the previous one, we arrive at the following results:

The gross expenditure for 1888-9 was £2936, as against £2250 6s. 8d. for 1889-90; and the gross receipts over the same periods were £2997 11s. 8d., as against £3283 8s. 10d.; the home receipts through ordinary subscriptions, showing an increase of £79 15s. 11d. on those of the previous year, and those for America of £100. In the last item, in the case of England, I do not include the large contributions to the Special Transport Fund; nor in the American account, the Student's Fund and the contribution of the University of Philadelphia to the carriage of blocks.

As regards the available assets at the close of the two periods: on the 31st July, 1889, our cash balance was £2593 12s. 10d., and at the same date in 1890 it stood as £3626 15s.

I need scarcely add that it is most fortunate that I am able to show such a large balance: for the fact must not be lost sight of that the Fund has entered upon what promises to be a successful, but at the same time a costly, undertaking. I refer to the Archæological Survey of Egypt. Acting upon the information contained in Mr. Griffith's paper read at the last Annual Meeting, the Council have appointed Mr. Newberry and Mr. Fraser to carry out the work. What progress these gentlemen have made, Miss Edwards will no doubt tell you in her report. I have only to deal with the accounts, and on this special item of expenditure the Council has already incurred a liability of nearly £500. Taking this in conjunction with M. Naville's expenses, who is carrying out excavations on two sites, at Ahnas and at the neighbouring cemetery, I have little doubt in anticipating a larger expenditure this year than in any previous one.

Mr. Pollard moved the adoption of the Report, complimenting the Hon. Treasurer on the clearness of his statement. He took occasion to speak warmly in favour of the new Archæological Survey, urging the Members present to follow his own example in subscribing to this new enterprise.

In seconding the Report, Mr. Baylis congratulated the Society upon the excellent manner in which their finances were managed by the Committee, and upon the new and important undertaking upon which they had embarked in the Archæological Survey of Egypt. Having himself travelled in Egypt, he could testify to the great need of such a record as was now in progress. He could, indeed, conceive of no work more valuable alike to those who travel in Egypt and to those who stay at home. As regarded the Memoirs annually issued by the Fund, he could not say too much in praise of the excellent paper, and the beauty of the type and illustrations. These books were undoubtedly of the full value of the standard subscription; and, regarded as a mere investment, were highly profitable to the subscribers.

The President expressed his hearty concurrence in all that Mr. Baylis had said with regard to the value and importance of the Archæological Survey, which would still further extend the usefulness of the Society; and he urged all Members present to interest their friends in the labours of the Egypt Exploration Fund. He hoped that every year would continue to show increasing prosperity. He added that the work of the Committee was invariably conducted with the strictest economy; the money was as well spent as possible, every farthing being used to the best advantage. The President then called upon the Hon. Secretary for her customary statement.

REPORT OF THE HONORARY SECRETARY.

SIR JOHN FOWLER, LADIES AND GENTLEMEN,—Before giving you my accustomed statement, I must congratulate the members of the Fund in the first place, and Sir John Fowler in the second place, on the fact that his great scientific achievements have received their well-deserved recognition at the hands of his Sovereign, he having been created a baronet since we last met. There can be no doubt that, to a generous man, no gratification he may derive from honours bestowed during his lifetime can possibly equal that which he feels in the knowledge that he can transmit those honours to his posterity. Sir John Fowler can now transmit that honour to his eldest son, and I am pleased to know that he has still yet more sons to be as proud of him as we are proud to have him for our President. In reference to what my friend, Professor Poole, has said regarding the great loss which the Society has sustained in the late Canon Liddon, I wish to draw attention to the fact that we have also lost a few other eminent persons; namely, the late Bishop of Durham, who was not only an eminent churchman, but a great Hellenic scholar, and who was always ready with his sympathy and support; also, the late Sir George Burns, Bart., founder of the great Cunard Line, who was not only a generous subscriber and donor to the funds of the Society, but who repeatedly caused large consignments of antiquities and Memoirs to be conveyed to America, free of cost, by the Cunard Line of steamers, thus indirectly aiding the treasury in a most practical and substantial manner. The Society has also to deplore in Colonel Adair the loss of a distinguished officer and subscriber.

It is my accustomed duty on these occasions briefly to report what has been done by the Society since the last general meeting, and to state what is the line of work laid down for the new season. You are, of course, aware that in consequence of M. Naville's illness, no excavations were conducted during the season 1889-90. M. Naville, however, paid a short visit to Egypt last spring for the purpose of surveying the site of Ahnas-el-Medineh, and of concluding arrangements for the present year with the Khedivial Government. You will be glad to hear that M. Naville is now in Egypt, having joined Count d'Hulst at Ahnas early in January. The ancient city represented by the extensive mounds of Ahnas is known as the Heracleopolis of the Greeks, and is cursorily mentioned in the Bible as "Hanes." It represents the capital of that very obscure period in Egyptian history covered by the VIIIth, IXth and Xth Dynasties. M. Naville and Count d'Hulst have been working in the outlying necropolis for the last three weeks, with no very encouraging results. They have opened more than a hundred tomb-pits, all of which had, however, been plundered in ancient times, and again used for interments during the Roman period. By this time, they are doubtless trenching the area of the great temple, with what results it will remain to be seen. Although a great temple of Bubastis is not to be discovered every year, I trust that the new excavations will not prove fruitless, and that some valuable historical results may be obtained.

The subject of the Archæological Survey having been already mentioned by previous speakers, I will only add that this survey is actually in progress, being conducted by Mr. Percy E. Newberry, a rising Egyptological scholar, and Mr. George Fraser, a skilled surveyor. These gentlemen have taken up their abode in one of the unpainted rock-cut sepulchres of Beni Hasan, and are actively engaged in copying, tracing, and photographing the scenes and inscriptions which enrich the more famous of these historic tombs. They have already cleared out the accumulated rubbish of centuries, thus restoring the admirable proportions of these excavated chambers, and bringing to light inscriptions which have never yet been read. Mr. Fraser, having cleared out several of the tomb-pits, and discovered in one of them evidences of an original interment in the shape of a skeleton, and a funerary tablet of the XIIth Dynasty, is now engaged in surveying the entire terrace; a task by no means easy, owing to the steep slope of the cliff and the difficulty of fixing his points. Mr. Newberry and Mr. Fraser have recently been joined by Mr. Blackden, an artist who is engaged in reproducing the colours of some of the more important subjects, which have been outlined by Mr. Newberry on the scale of the originals.

Our new volume Bubastis is, I trust by this time, in the hands of all subscribers, and there is no need to praise it to those who already have it on their shelves. It is one of the most magnificent volumes we have ever issued, with its fifty-four plates, including a large number of autotypes; and it has already cost us, in production and delivery, nearly £500. You may have observed that in Bubastis you have received no plates of the Festival Hall; but M. Naville has reserved the description of this part of the temple for an independent volume. The state of the blocks was so fragmentary, and the difficulty of photographing them was so great, that they can only be reproduced as linear plates taken from squeezes. Madame Naville is now engaged in drawing them; and she and M. Naville have so successfully arranged the blocks that the processional subjects will be given as far as possible in their original sequence, broken, however, by inevitable lacunæ where the sculptured blocks were either missing or defaced.

The sale of past Memoirs, as reported by the Hon. Treasurer, is steadily increasing, and, as I predicted some two or three years ago, the Society has become, not only a society of excavators, but of important publishers and booksellers. The sum of £108 9s. has been received by myself alone during the past year by sales of books, irrespective of copies disposed of by Messrs Trübner and Co. Among new subscribers to the Fund during the past year, I am glad to report no less than twenty-four public libraries, including the library of the Science and Art Department, South Kensington, and the libraries of the Fitzwilliam Museum, Queen's College, St. John's College, and Trinity College, Cambridge. I hope that before long there will be no great college, cathedral, or public library in England which does not subscribe for the Works of the Fund.

The staff of Local Honorary Secretaries continues to increase and prosper, the Society now numbering no less than thirty-nine of these invaluable unpaid officials; besides one in New Zealand, one in Australia, one in Canada, one in Mexico, and one in Switzerland. I am glad to see that an organisation of Local Honorary Secretaries has also been taken in hand by the Rev. Dr. Winslow, our zealous and active Vice-President and Honorary Treasurer for America. Dr. Winslow has already established thirty-five Local Hon. Secretaries in various parts of the United States, the majority of whom, I am happy to say, are ladies.* It is my belief that this is especially a field in which woman's work is calculated to be eminently successful. I hold that ladies make the best beggars in the world, and that their begging is always likely to be more fruitful than that of gentlemen, because the gentlemen do not like to refuse them. Of the increasing prosperity of the Fund in America, there can remain no doubt when tested by the report just read by the Hon. Treasurer, showing a return of £1350 on the part of the Rev. Dr. Winslow, and a further sum of £240 from the University of Pennsylvania.

I cannot conclude without urging upon you the claims of the Archæological Survey—a work rendered doubly necessary at the present time by the rapid and wanton destruction to which the monuments of Egypt are being subjected at the hands of native plunderers, unscrupulous dealers, and iconoclastic tourists. We cannot hope, it is true, entirely to arrest this work of mutilation and destruction; but we can at least preserve a faithful record of what yet remains of these precious relics of the most ancient civilisation in the world. Also, by drawing attention to the beauty and value of these relics, we shall exercise a certain moral pressure, not only upon travellers, but upon all classes of officials, thus hampering the hand of the unscrupulous destroyer, and compelling a greater reverence for the monuments themselves.

The PRESIDENT then proposed a vote of thanks to Miss Edwards for the encouraging and interesting account which she had just given of the work and prospects of the Fund. He only regretted that England should in any respect lag behind America. He would have preferred that the English subscription list should have at least equalled that of America in its amount. He was quite sure that the Americans themselves would not feel hurt by his desire that the parent society should maintain its lead, and he hoped by the time they should re-assemble for the next annual meeting, such a special effort would have been made in this direction that the balance of cash should be on the side of the old country.

Mr. POOLE then referred to Mr. Griffith's interesting paper read at the last meeting, containing the suggestion of the beginning of a new era by a systematic survey of the monuments of Egypt yet above ground. Mr. Poole felt that the survey of existing monuments, which were rapidly being destroyed by the ignorant Arab peasant and by the modern tourist, was a very important work. He, therefore, desired to draw the attention of the meeting to the double duty undertaken by the Fund in its work of discovery and preservation. These two labours were of parallel importance.

Mr. Poole considered it was only necessary to glance at the reports that had appeared in the newspapers for the past few days of M. Grébaut's great discovery at Thebes of the tombs of the high priests of Amen Ra, to show how much remained to be achieved by the explorer. There was, in fact, no part of Egypt in which a skilled excavator might not hope to find his labours rewarded. Mr. Poole urged the Meeting to support the work just commenced by Mr. Newberry and Mr. Fraser; for there had never yet been made a complete and accurate copy of Egyptian inscriptions, even the best known works having been mainly made before photography was available, and consequently they needed abundant correction. Mr. Newberry was doing all that could be done by means of tracings and photographs to make such a record of the tombs of Beni Hasan in Middle Egypt. Between the time of the old pyramid builders and the XVIIIth Dynasty, stood the XIIth Theban Dynasty (circa 2200 B.C.), of which these tombs were the most important extant record, and of which no thoroughly satisfactory copy existed. Several of the tombs were painted with most interesting scenes of daily life, and of intercourse with foreigners, one group of whom had been incorrectly supposed to represent Joseph and his brethren. The Survey publications would be illustrated by coloured plates of the most important scenes, particularly including the skilful delineation of plants, quadrupeds, and birds. The preparation of these volumes would be costly, and though the Hon. Treasurer had given them a cheering account of the monetary condition of the Fund, Mr. Poole felt strongly that this work ought to be well supported in order to be worthily carried out. Miss Edwards had desired him to say that whether these publications should be annual or not could not be determined till the Committee saw their size, and could estimate the cost of bringing them out, but their hearty wish was to treat the subscribers as handsomely as possible. On his own account, without reference to his position as a Vice-President of the Fund, Mr. Poole was sorry to see money being drawn from the General Fund for the purposes of the Survey, and what he should prefer would be that the Special Archæological Survey should be supported by a small and separate income, say of £500 per annum. Established upon such a foundation, he felt that the Survey might be carried on for very many years to come, and that it might so survive its original founders.

Mr. BAYLIS, Q.C., then proposed a vote of thanks to the Chairman for the admirable way in which he had conducted the business of the meeting.

Mr. ARTHUR CATES seconded this resolution.

The PRESIDENT expressed his acknowledgments, adding that it gave him the greatest possible pleasure to be of service to the Fund; and, although he was unable to attend many of the Committee Meetings, when he was really required he was always at the disposal of their Hon. Secretary.

MR. GRIFFITH'S REPORT

ON THE

ARCHÆOLOGICAL SURVEY OF EGYPT.

MR. GRIFFITH'S REPORT

ON THE

ARCHÆOLOGICAL SURVEY OF EGYPT.

It is with feelings of unmixed gratitude to the great Society[1] which has accepted and fostered a timidly-suggested scheme, that I have the honour to present the first Report of the Archæological Survey of Egypt. Scanty it must be, for only a few chips from the busy workshop at Beni Hasan have found their way to me; but I look forward to seeing the counterfeit presentment of all that is most interesting in the paintings and sculptures which enrich that wonderful group of tombs brought here to London, and finally preserved from the attacks of every enemy. Such will be the worthy result of the labours of a single season.

It is not difficult for one who has studied Egyptian archæology in the country for some years to see what is required in order that the archæological inheritance of so many centuries may not be swept away at the very moment when the world appears ready to receive and appreciate it. What can be done to stem the torrent of absolute destruction? Here and there a single tomb or temple can be put under lock and key by the action of the Government, or some learned society may undertake its restoration. But history, science and art demand more than this. The Nile valley contains a multitude of monuments and ruins,—some partly described, some as yet almost unknown, but all alike exposed to the attacks of the dealer in antiquities, the quarryman and the wanton iconoclast. To collect all the information that can be gathered from all extant monuments appears to be the first step to take in this direction. Underground lie other stores of knowledge in the buried monuments, safe from all but the excavator's spade, and reserved for the enterprise of posterity. Lastly come the small antiquities, which when comprehended are not less instructive, and are much more unfailing than the monuments. These have only now begun to speak to the world, and their silent evidence is swept away wholesale from day to day.

[1] I desire especially to express my thanks to Professor R. S. Poole, whose timely aid and steady encouragement set the scheme on its legs and made it a reality.

But a systematic archæological survey of the monuments is now commenced, and will furnish the best answer to the question propounded above. If the originals must vanish, they can at least be classified; and plans and copies can, with time, money, and perseverance, be made of all. These copies can be rendered available for students in a space of moderate dimensions, while their publication on a reduced scale will hasten the rapid progress of Egyptological science and research.

In November, 1889, the General Meeting approved the suggestion of an Archæological Survey of Egypt. The idea present in my mind at that time was a rapid sketch-survey, to result in an elaborate catalogue of monuments, with references to all publications, the object being to point out in detail what work had been accomplished and what still required to be done.

For many months the matter remained at a standstill. No one appeared ready to undertake the work. At length Mr. Fraser, who had not only manifested great interest in Egyptian antiquities, but had sent me copies of some important inscriptions from the neighbourhood of Minyeh, was engaged by the Egypt Exploration Fund to prepare a large block for removal from Tell Basta. His offer to assist in the excavations, or in the survey, followed, and was accepted.

At this juncture Mr. Newberry also volunteered to take up the work.

We first planned a sketch-survey from Minyeh to Siût (Assyût). Our endeavour to prepare for this survey showed the impossibility of attaining any satisfactory result. Mr. Newberry then proposed to take up a small district and treat it exhaustively, which seemed to me the only practicable and satisfactory course. We then selected a district which contained three well-known groups of monuments, namely: certain tombs of the VIth Dynasty at Kûm-el-Ahmar, opposite Minyeh on the north;[1] the celebrated group of Beni Hasan tombs to the southward (XIIth Dynasty); and, two miles farther up the river, the grottoes of Speos Artemidos (XVIIIth Dynasty). The district is only fifteen miles long. The above monuments are excavated in the eastern cliffs, but the western bank has scarcely been explored at all.

For this little section of the valley of the Nile, we thoroughly examined at the British Museum all works of authority, both published and in manuscript. It is, however, doubtful whether the whole of the present season will not be occupied in copying one single group of monuments. At Beni Hasan are thirty-nine tombs, twelve of which are inscribed, while eight of these twelve are not only inscribed but painted. The rest are plain, but there are altogether twelve thousand square feet of painted wall-surface. The outlines of these paintings are blurred, the colours are dim, and all the surfaces are defaced by the bats, the smoke, the graffiti of modern tourists, the wanton injuries inflicted by the natives, and the oils and other preparations of former copyists.

All these twelve thousand square feet have to be puzzled out and the colours identified, while a faithful transcript, of which every detail is of as much importance as the ensemble, must be made by means of tracing-paper.

Let him who would realise what this means mount a ladder and trace a fresco in one of our ancient churches. He will then appreciate the steady devotion of the copyist to his task of twelve thousand square feet.

[1] As far as I can learn, these tombs, which are described by Champollion, Lepsius and Prisse, are now entirely destroyed.

The paintings are in a worse state than they were fifty years ago, and it is a very fortunate circumstance for us that the Hay Collection of Drawings, made between 1836 and 1837, is at the British Museum. These drawings have preserved for us many subjects now obliterated.[1] The portfolios of the late Sir Gardner Wilkinson also contain a few memoranda of value for the work at and about Beni Hasan. The notes and drawings which he collected—unlike Hay's great Collection, which was hardly ever utilised for publication—was the stock from which the celebrated Egyptian traveller drew the materials for his numerous archæological works. There is, therefore, less of novelty in them; but our sincere thanks are none the less due to Miss Lovett and Sir Vauncey Crewe for having deposited on loan for our use a collection which will undoubtedly prove from time to time to be of very great value.

Mr. Newberry started from England on November 5th, taking with him annotated tracings, photographs, and copies of all the published scenes and inscriptions necessary for his purpose. On the 25th he reached Beni Hasan, and, thanks to Mr. Fraser's knowledge of the country and the people, had no difficulty in settling down for his first campaign. The tombs in Egypt have often afforded pleasant and secure lodging for explorers. In this case an uninscribed tomb, "No. 15," has been "adapted."

Selected portions of the Beni Hasan inscriptions were

[1] From 1826 to 1837 Robert Hay was almost constantly at work in Egypt, and he employed also several excellent artists. But his own share of the work was most important. Besides a multitude of landscape subjects, architectural sketches and drawings of small antiquities by him, the very numerous and important inscriptions in the collection are copied by his skilled hand. Having worked through most of his diaries and portfolios, I am now in a position to state that the copies from the tombs of Siût which I attributed to Burton and Arundale, were all, or nearly all, by the indefatigable organiser of the expedition; his only assistant at Siût being Mr. Laver.

long ago copied with great accuracy by Lepsius. Hay's copies are also good, and suggested to me some important emendations, some of which are now verified. The progress of science and the rectification of the copies will enable us to give a much improved account of them. It is intended to copy carefully a specimen of every coloured hieroglyph; and in the scenes, the colours of all important details will be reproduced. By this means much light will be thrown on the origin of hieroglyphic signs, and on the nature of the objects depicted. Mr. Blackden, an artist who has turned his attention to Egyptian subjects with great success, is now assisting Mr. Newberry in the colouring.

While the tombs were being cleared of rubbish, some very interesting objects came to light—namely, the chisels with which the tombs were excavated. They are wedge-shaped, six to ten inches long, chipped from the boulders found thereabouts. The description that I have received is vague, but undoubtedly they will excite a great deal of interest when brought to England. Two pots were also found, containing about 1,000 small bronze Roman coins of the fourth and fifth centuries A.D., including some of Arcadius, Marcianus, and Leo.

A pit was excavated in part of one of the uninscribed tombs: it contained three skeletons, with pottery and beads "of the XVIIIth or XIXth Dynasty," and a broken stela of the XIIth Dynasty, giving the name of a man and his wife. The former is Nekht; his father's name also was Nekht, and his mother's, Hotepu. He appears to have been steward to one of the great princes who were interred in the principal tomb.

A good harvest of Coptic graffiti has also been gathered from among the ruins of various Coptic edifices in the neighbourhood of Beni Hasan. Most fortunately Mr. Headlam, fellow of All Souls' College, Oxford, happened to come that way, and was kind enough to verify the copies.

It is very satisfactory to find that the survey has met with the warmest approval of many members of the Egyptian Government. General Sir F. Grenfell, himself a connoisseur in Egyptian archæology, after visiting Beni Hasan, proffered a donation of £25 towards obtaining an artist to assist in the work; since when, Sir John Fowler, President of the Egypt Exploration Fund, has generously given another £25 for the same purpose. Baker Pasha has secured for our workers the assistance of the police authorities of the district, and many others have expressed their approval in the heartiest manner.

Mr. Newberry reports that tourists have visited the tombs of Beni Hasan at the rate of a hundred in a week; and it is to be hoped that the choice of that group of monuments may result in some material support to the Survey Branch of the Egypt Exploration Fund.

SPECIAL ARCHÆOLOGICAL SURVEY FUND.

MR. VILLIERS STUART'S CHALLENGE.

Mr. H. Villiers Stuart, in confirmation of an offer made by himself in the columns of The Times (Tuesday, October 7th, 1890) volunteers to give £50 towards the expenses of this undertaking, provided that forty-nine other well-wishers to the Archæological Survey of Egypt will give the same amount. The first donation towards this special fund has already been made by Miss M. H. McClean (through Mrs. McClure, Local Hon. Secretary for the S.W. Metropolitan district), which is here gratefully acknowledged.
